In our MEMBA program you’re surrounded by elite professionals who thrive on personal accountability and results. “People skills” don’t always come naturally. But for those who can combine business fundamentals with integrated leader development skills, they will find themselves well on their way to mastering relationship management, too. Our MEMBA curriculum incorporates personal assessments, coaching, and coursework around an academic focus on the four key areas of leadership: cognitive, behavioral, emotional, and relational.

LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT COURSE

Faculty Example: Rick Gilkey

Rick Gilkey, associate professor in the practice of organization and management, addresses the critical personality and interpersonal factors linked to leadership effectiveness. This focuses on areas of emotional intelligence-based thinking such as self-awareness, self-management, empathy, and social skills. He also teaches on psychodynamic work issues, including organizational anxiety, stress, and defenses, that can easily impair the performance of leaders and their teams. Faculty members like Gilkey understand the complexity and value of leadership development, which is why Goizueta offers executives the means to develop skills that will empower them to lead with intelligence, moral sensitivity, and with an eye toward success.
Our program delivers top-ranked academics to distinguish you from your peers on the job today, while simultaneously offering insights on how to identify opportunities for your future. The Career Management Center for Working Professionals (CMCWP) offers courses tailored to maximizing your executive trajectory. Take advantage of available CMCWP workshops — from Building your Personal Brand to Redefining your Skillset for a New Audience — as you translate your experiences. Use these new skills to network with other successful alumni and business leaders, creating the perfect outline for the next phase of your career.

ROB SUBA, 2015 MEMBA

Director of Program Management, Cardinal Health

Rob wanted his MEMBA experience to help him grow as a business leader, but couldn’t have imagined how significantly Emory’s career resources would play into his overall progression. Early in the program, Suba attended a session offered by Goizueta’s Career Management Center for Working Professionals (CMCWP) and walked away seeing how much career potential he possessed. Working with his designated career coach, Rob formulated a plan to seek out new opportunities better aligned to his aptitude and interests. He was able to interact with the CMCWP despite being based in Ohio, through conference calls, online communications and in-person meetings. The result? A targeted, strategic plan to identify common “forward growth careers and adjacencies” to find progressive opportunities in his field. Within a few months, Rob landed a phenomenal role in his organization that expanded his responsibilities and influence. Suba credits the CMCWP for helping him uncover his hidden value. “My new role truly fits my skill level, and perfectly sets me up for even greater responsibilities post-graduation.”
